The fact that a firm has a person who will concern himself with the problems of others should be a commendation and not a "black eye" for that firm. Unfortunately, it appears that this is not the case with the NFO organizers and the mail order house.

harshly with us. When we complain, they point to the way we have kept them from selling more of their products here.

So the Common Market is very important to us, because Europe is a big customer, and we need the business—for both farm and industrial products.

In the end, business will go to the most efficient producers, here or there, just as it does within the United States. For those who really believe in free competition, it is the only long-term answer.

One World

FORMER President Herbert Hoover's suggestion that perhaps the world needed something more than the United Nations in order to preserve peace is a burr under a lot of saddles along the Potomac. Those to whom the UN is the ne plus ultra, the sine qua non, are still trying to belittle his idea for a council of the free nations that could move when the UN failed.

Mr. Hoover lamented the manner in which Communist tactics have destroyed any chance the UN might ever have had of being an effective world council. He affirmed their conviction that the indiscriminate acceptance of unready new nations into full membership could do nought but dissipate the organization's ability to move toward peaceful solutions of world problems.

Babson Discusses Christmas Trade

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Nov. 7—Despite recent congressional sparring politicking throughout the land, the parties has not had points in the situation One remains the "one" economy is going that Christmas shopping this Kennedy Administration. Frankly, I think basic predictions pick this is good, Christmas for 1962 promises new — and international people more anxious money for personal rather than for stock market recreation this point.

Barometers
Special Product of the first five weeks a gain ago. While this spectacular advance of economic to see some the between end of the year. favorable retail client I anticipate normal seasonal and some disappointment be in the factory ing in at least of overtime wages to supplement regular salaries and other income for many families.

A bright spot, too, is personal income, now topping a year ago by somewhat more than five percent. Between now and year's end I look for continued increases in personal income, probably widening the favorable margin over year-earlier figures. In spite of a heavy tax burden and other large fixed payments, disposable income will also keep on rising at least through the rest of this year.

Your Buying Cycle

There is a lot more to Christmas Holiday than is immediately evident. When you make a purchase, for example, you start a business cycle in miniature. You not only give pleasure to the one receiving the gift, but you also help the retailer, providing him with the money to conduct his important distribution operations. Keep in mind that you not only give the retailer his percentage of profit, but also help to send along their small cuts to many other worthy people. These include the retail clerks, the landlord, advertisers, and others either directly or indirectly involved. This means more people employed all along the line, and hence more wage earners to keep the cycle in healthy motion.

It is my feeling that spending psychology will remain good at least until early 1963. At the end of December you will see my detailed "Forecast for 1963" in these pages, in which I will analyze and project major business trends, including whatever changes of atmosphere may crop up between now and then. It is particularly important to note that the stock market declines of 1962 have actually had no serious affect on retail sales, even though the business community generally has perhaps become hesitant and cautious since the Cuban upset.

Banner Christmas Seen

I am expectin Christmas buying to top last year's record by perhaps two percent - three percent; that means another history high for the holiday season. I should emphasize that this does not represent anything like a boom, but only an upward nudging on the already elevated plateau. Get ready for an extraordinarily lively demand in such lines as toys, clothes, greeting cards, and — contrary to the forecasts of some observers — even home furnishings. I advise heavy holiday promotions, aimed at the enormous upper-teen-age group.

I would be somewhat more encouraged about the approaching holiday buying if it were not for the previously mentioned caution on the part of the general business community, the still sagging stock market, and sharpening international hostilities. Competition will be keener than ever, of course, so that many price upshadings will have to be absorbed by retailers. This will require more advertising—especially in local newspapers.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Bible Material: Genesis 1:26-31; Psalm 8; Matthew 6:24-34; Hebrews 2:6-18.
Devotional Reading: Hebrews 2: 8-18.

Man

Lesson for November 11, 1962.

Most people would call the Bible a book about God; and this is true. But there is something just as true, and for us very important: it is a book about man. Just as there are truths about God that will not be known unless God reveals them, so there are truths about man that have to be shown us. The real fact of man has seldom taken itself seriously enough. Men suppose they are like the beasts that perish; today here, tomorrow gone, and nothing else to be said. Men think their lives are so short and insignificant that it does not matter to any one what they do. Men have thought of themselves as so tied to this planet that when it dies we shall die with it. Men have seen that we are animals, and they think we need no more than animals do, food, a little place in the sunshine. What's right or wrong for a beast is right or wrong for us . . . and so forth.

Man the Master

The Bible gives no encouragement to any such mistakes. Man is much higher than a mere "higher animal." He is not just all a creature of God, that is the key to the meaning of his existence. "Thou hast made him," the poet-psalmist cries. This alone gives man a glory the same hand that wrought the universe, the same Mind that conceived the galaxies, are the mind and the hand that designed and developed man and mankind. Not only so, but God has made man only a little lower than God, so far as this earth is concerned. On this earth, our home, God has set man as the master of all. Every living thing is placed under the control of man. Much that man does, especially the good that man does, is part of his continuing age-old struggle to be what God created and intended him to be: master of life on this planet. Every hospital you see is a battle-ground, a part of the long war against the tiny living things that cause disease — germs and viruses. When you see a wheat field or a water tower, you see signs of man's conquest of hunger and thirst. When you see a filling store, or turn on your furnace or light the wood in your fireplace, you are looking at part of man's long war with the elements in which he lives. Man is not meant by the high God to be the victim of his environment but to rise above it and control it.

Man the Slave

But that is not the whole story. The meaning of man is not to be found in his conquests alone, but in his service. Sometimes he must have. Man (it has been said) is "incurably religious." That is to say, some God man must have. He has a kind of worshipping instinct. The strange thing is that man is often found devoting himself and his talents to what is actually below him.

Jesus put it memorably: You cannot serve God and mammon; in other words, you cannot serve God and money. To serve God is to fulfill the purpose for which you were created. To serve money, to serve things, is to be a slave of what should serve man, not ride him. Whatever a man hangs his heart on and depends on, that is God to him, said Martin Luther. Strange how many idols man makes for himself!

Man the Spirit

Another mistake men make about themselves is to confuse themselves with their bodies. This is a natural mistake, because whatever we do or think, we can do or think only with the aid of our bodies. But that does not mean that the body is the most important part of us. It does not rate our major concentrated interest. It does not deserve the pampering we give it. Jesus asks why we put so much thought on caring for our bodies.

A lady selling a young people's encyclopedia went by appointment to a beautiful home with several children. The lady of the house did not want the encyclopedia; too expensive, she said. Her visitor pointed out: "As I came up the drive I noticed about $200 worth of play equipment — bicycles and what not — in the yard. Why do you spend all that for what's below their necks and begrudge the same money for their minds?" And she might well have added: "And how much do you spend for their souls?"

Appomattox County Library

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK is being observed during the week of Nov. 11th-17th. The idea of a Children's Book Week was conceived in 118 by two men dedicated to the publishing and enjoyment of fine books: Franklin K. Matthews, Chief Librarian of the Boy Scouts of America, and Frederic G. Melcher, than secretary of the American Book-sellers Association and now chairman of the R. R. Bowker Company. Mr. Matthews was distressed by the poor quality of reading material available to boys. His concern and interest, he was able to get booksellers and writers to prepare better literature for boys and girls.

In 1918, the American Library Association gave their endorsement to the observance of a "special emphasis" week for campaign for better literature. Thus came about the Book Week Committee which was formed to devise slogans, prepare posters, newspaper releases, magazine articles and editorials. This year there is a lovely poster by Kate Seredy, an author - illustrator of books for young people, entitled I LIKE BOOKS.

The need for BOOK WEEK has broadened and continues — for "A great nation is a reading nation, and in this broad country of ours, books should be freely available for every boy and girl. Until they are freely available, we have a great task" —

And now — for adults, may we suggest the following:

ONLY FIFTY YEARS AGO by Gladys Hasty Carroll. Little Brown, 239p. 162 —

Would you like to know how people in New England lived 50 years ago? What they did through the winter months, with no food freezers or refrigerators? How they celebrated the 4th of July? What was the last day of school like? Here is recreated the whole cycle of a year in a family's life from January through to December. Read of these people who used the tools and treasures of 50 years ago and carefully collect today. Here are hardtisted, generous, gentle, wise and strong characters, real as rain

TREASURES FROM THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART ed. by Huntington Cairns, Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D. C. 162 —

A BEAUTIFUL BOOK TO BEHOLD! — eighty - five reproductions in color of works of art from the National Galleryx collection. They are accompanied by comments of the artist. The printing of the color is of a high degree of fidelity. You will feel that you have actually been on a tour of our Nations Capital's foremost place to visit. You will especially enjoy the portraits of the "Holy Family" and the nativity scenes, as we approach the Christmas season.

A WOMAN WANTS GOD AND GOD WANTS PEOPLE John Knox Press, 1962—

Both titles written by Mrs. Mary Lou Lacy, a native of Martinsville and a graduate of Randolph Maxon Woman's College in Lynchburg — are books of inspiration. With moving simplicity, the author leads you along a path of reaching out to other people with love and understanding. She shows how this concern must extend to those who are disagreeable as well as those who are easy to love. It can never forget that everyone feels, hurts, cares—and is made in God's own image.

Excellent books for Christmas gifts and cost only $2.00 each.

"The world of books is the most remarkable creation of man; nothing else that he builds ever last — Monuments fall, nations perish, civilizations grow old and die out. After an era of darkness new races build others; but in the world of books are volumes that live on — still as young and fresh as the day they were written — still telling men's hearts of men centuries dead"— Clarence Day.

Traffic Statistics 1st Nine Months

Richmond, Va. . . . Virginia entered the last, and most dangerous, quarter of 1962 with 69 more traffic deaths than were experienced during the similar period of 1961, according to statistics released today by Colonel C. W. Woodson, Jr., Superintendent of State Police and Chairman of the Governor's Highway Safety Committee.

To make matters even worse, Colonel Woodson pointed out that 1962's deaths topped those of 1961 by exactly 100, or more than 13 percent. Largest monthly increase were 63 in February as against 36 in 1961 and 93 in July as against 46 in 1961.

Crashes killing more than one person each rose from 59 killing 165 persons in the first three quarters of 1961 to 63 killing 165 in the 1962 period. Two of the 1962 crashes killed eight each; two, five each, and five, four each. Pedestrian deaths rose from 14 to 139. One September week end set a record of 30 deaths.

National Safety Council figures covering the first eight months of the year show a 12 percent increase for Virginia and one of 9 percent for the entire nation. Virginia's neighboring states appear to be having similar experiences, with Maryland up 32 percent, West Virginia 25, Kentucky 23, Tennessee 9 and North Carolina 12.

Colonel Woodson felt it was probable that the nation's deaths would exceed 40,000 for the first time in history. Previous high was 39,969 in 1941. He did not, however, predict that Virginia would exceed her all - time high of 1,110, also set in 1941.

In asking for increased caution, Colonel Woodson pointed to the additional autumn and winter dangers of early darkness, football games and holidays, increased drinking, and heavy pedestrian traffic during the Christmas shopping season.

Veterans Day Nov. 11-12

Commander J. S. Moore of Legion Post 104, Appomattox, has requested citizens and businessmen to remember Veterans' Day by displaying the American flag on November 11 and 12.

Since Veterans' Day falls on Sunday this year, the observance will also be held on Monday. This holiday was formerly called Armistice Day, and is the day set aside to honor veterans of all wars fought by the U.S.

Every Number In The Book

Local Jaycees used many ideas to "get out the vote." If you were at home Monday night before election, you probably received a telephone call, because they planned to "phone every number in the book —plus some that have been added since the directory was published.

Send In 4-H Record Books

All record books for projects taken last year must be in the extension agent's office by November 20th if they are to be considered for the various county awards available. County winners and their parents will be guests at a banquet and awards program to be held on December 14th. Letters are being sent to all 4-H'ers who have not turned in all of their records, as a reminder.

Post Office Closed For Veterans Day

There will be no rural mail delivery Monday, Nov. 12, announced Postmaster H. W. Conner this week. The service lobby at the local post office will also be closed, he said, in observance of Veterans Day.

Xmas Stamps

Only 2,000 Christmas commemorative stamps arrived last Friday, reported Postmaster H. W. Conner. Therefore, it's first come, first served while supplies last.

Conner has sent in a requisition for additional stamps in the colorful holiday green and red of this special issue.
